

Unintentional Wardrobe Infraction

So what've we got here? A nice lady taking a leisurely spin on her moped. She's doin' perty good safety-wise ... wearing a helmet, got both hands on the grips, mirrors adjusted, wearing bright clothing. Heck, she's even sitting up straight. Everything checks out good, right?

Well, almost. Take another look at her helmet. It's on her head (where it belongs) so she deserves a point for that. But do you notice anything odd about it? It's on upside-down. She's lookin' out of the part where her neck should be. How absent-minded is that!?

I'm sure she felt like a complete idiot when someone pointed out her truly unintentional wardrobe infraction. Y'know, like that feeling you get if you're at a party and you're caught with your shirt on inside-out or your zipper down.

Her backwards helmet may still have helped in an accident, but one lesson to learn here, folks, is that you need to know how to wear your protective gear. With PPE like a harness or respirator, the risk increases significantly when you don't wear it right.